HIRING PANEL REPORT

Marketing Analytics Intern at Northwind Foods

Riley Castellano
2026-10-20
Panel feedback · rewrite not done yet

THE PANEL

4 of 7
would move you forward

4 yes · 2 unsure · 1 no

Each reviewer answered: should this resume move to the next step for this job?

SIMULATED SCREENING CHECK

90 / 100
Ready to send Machine readability: Clean
Required terms: 5 of 6 found (2 only in your skills list)

Overall = 40% file readability + 40% job-keyword match + 20% content signals, rounded to steps of 5. Weights are our judgment, not calibrated to hiring outcomes.

NEXT STEP

Answer a few questions in chat
Or say skip. Then Claude rebuilds your resume from your real experience only.

Mode: 7 independent reviewers (Claude Code)

WHAT A RECRUITER SEES IN 7 SECONDS "Business analytics student, marketing intern and shift lead, Excel and survey work."

FIX BEFORE YOU SEND

- A 300% sales claim with no baseline or method. Say what you actually did for the sale, and keep the number only with its real baseline.

BIGGEST WEAKNESSES, MOST SERIOUS FIRST TOP 5 OF 9

1. SQL is required but only shows up as a class MAJOR — Flagged by 1 of 7
   The posting asks for SQL experience. I see it in your coursework and skills list, but no line shows you using it…
   Open If a class project used SQL, describe it in one line with what you queried.

2. Internship bullets describe duties, not results MODERATE — Flagged by 3 of 7
   I can see what you were responsible for, not what changed because you did it.
   Open Say what you wrote or tracked and what happened next.

3. The top third reads marketing, not analytics MODERATE — Flagged by 2 of 7
   In a fast skim I see Marketing Intern and newsletter work first. The analytics side of you shows up later.
   Open Open the internship with the sales numbers bullet so analytics shows in the first lines.

4. Your closest match to this job sits low on the page MODERATE — Flagged by 2 of 7
   The survey project is the most analytics-heavy thing here and it comes after two jobs.
   Open Move the survey project up, or lead the internship with the sales numbers work.

5. A 300% sales claim with no baseline or method MAJOR — Flagged by 1 of 7
   300% compared to what, over what period, and what was your part? An interviewer will ask, and a vague answer hurts every other line.
   Open Say what you actually did for the sale, and keep the number only with its real baseline.

WHAT NEEDS YOU, REAL GAPS

What changes next
Nothing yet. After you answer, Claude rewrites your resume from your own lines and answers only.

Needs you
- SQL is required but only shows up… What did you do with SQL in your class projects?
- Internship bullets describe duties… Did you write the newsletter yourself…
- +4 more

Real gaps (not fixable by wording)
The panel didn't flag any gap that wording can't fix.

Next steps: 1. Fix what 'Fix before you send' lists before you apply anywhere. 2. Answer the questions in chat, or reply skip. Then Claude rebuilds your resume.

THE PANEL

REVIEWER	VERDICT	MOVE FORWARD?	IN ONE LINE
Automated Screening Check Machine readability and job keywords	Strong yes	Yes	The file parses cleanly and most required terms are there; communication is the missing one.
Hiring Manager Proof you can do this job	Lean yes	Yes	The survey project and the Excel work earn a call; SQL beyond a class is the open question.
Recruiter The fast first skim	Lean yes	Yes	Clean and easy to skim; the top third says marketing more than analytics.
Competing Applicant Side by side with a strong applicant	Borderline	Unsure	Your survey project is a real edge, but it is buried and SQL is only listed.
CEO Business outcomes and ownership	Borderline	Unsure	I see useful work, but not yet what changed for the business because of you.
Future Teammate Day-one usefulness on the team	Lean yes	Yes	I could hand you an Excel task next sprint; SQL and dashboards would need some ramp-up.
Skeptic Claims that must survive a probe	Lean no	No	The 300% sales line will not survive one follow-up question; the rest holds up.

Verdict: how each reviewer rates the resume through their own lens. Move forward: whether they would pass it on.